Miss Fannie Crosby, the aged and blind hymn writer and poetess, was a guest of honor at the feet of the German Reformed church, yesterday morning. She made a touching little address for the benefit of the children, whom she has loved for a year ago, so that she had added them to her list of "dear children." She told how she had been loved, composed, and listened smiling while the congregation sang several of her compositions. Miss Crosby was presented with a bouquet of flowers by the children, by little Miss Helen Schmidt, the daughter of Leo Schmidt, superintendent of the Sunday school. The feast continued throughout the afternoon and evening. At the evening service Pastor Welner preached a mission sermon which was heard with great attention.

The concert by the Yale Freshman Glee Club, which was given in the ball room of the Stratfield, Saturday evening, was well attended. A dance followed the concert.

Fritz G. Hartmann, 592 William St. was surprised by a party of 25 of his

KLEBAN & GELMAN DRY GOODS STORE

Anniversary Sale Reigns All This Week Until Saturday.

Business of Growing Business House Has Extended Over Five Floors.

The most attractive business building in Main street at the present time is the Kleban & Gelman dry goods emporium, which is celebrating the third anniversary of its existence in the present location. The building is very prettily decorated with American flags, and the interior arrangement is very pleasing to the eye, decorations of flags being intermingled with the display of seasonable merchandise at attractive prices. The enterprising methods of the Kleban & Gelman store and the great number of people that the store has attracted to that portion of the city were the reason for the building of the present structure. The success in a man's life cannot be measured by the money he has made, neither can the success of a store be measured by money alone. There are other elements that enter into the life of a store the same as that of an individual, that may lead to its healthy growth. It is not a mere making of money, and it is of that kind of success that Kleban & Gelman can justly be proud, for they have established themselves with an enviable reputation for straightforward and honest business dealing. The building in which Kleban & Gelman are located is of a modern, strictly fireproof construction, and enjoys the lowest insurance rate of any dry goods store in the State of Connecticut. When Kleban & Gelman moved into their present building they had occupied but two floors of it. Today the business has extended over five floors, the basement, first, second and third floors, and the fourth floor, which is now occupied by the children's shoe department and to domestic and yard goods. On the main floor, the fancy goods, ribbons, lace, embroideries, muslin and knitted underwear, infants' wear, and men's furnishings goods are sold. The second floor is entirely devoted to the selling of ladies' and children's ready-made garments. On the third floor the pictures, art goods, and toys are sold. The fourth floor is devoted to the selling of stock rooms, and the dressmaking department. All these five floors are connected with special elevators, and modern electric passenger elevators, located right near the entrance of the building. Just now the store looks peculiarly attractive, and on account of its decorations and the display of merchandise, but principally because it is kept so crowded with goods, and the fact that the store is the unusual savings the celebration affords. The Anniversary Sale continues all this week until Saturday, and we congratulate Kleban & Gelman on the success of their sale, and wish them the enjoyment of a great many more in the future.

The Bridging of The Pequonnock At Ogden Street

To the Editor of The Farmer:—Sir: To the mind of the progressive citizen the growth of the city is an eternal feast, supplying such pleasant food for reflection that he who makes a study of the past of life, is, actually, a benefactor, at least, is a pioneer in the realm of thought which may some day lead to action, and if the city is to be a city of the future, it should be some consideration paid to the subjects of his observation when the good of the community is taking into account. The necessity for means for the protection of property on the rapidly growing East Side should be given an immediate consideration. The building of a site for such protection should be made with a view to the largest circuit over which its property saving influence could be exerted. To the man about town there may be many tales which to him appear idle, and without due consideration the suggestion to locate on such a spot might be favorably looked upon. Few, however, look to the establishing of a permanent and necessarily expensive acquisition of the city, and the city's future and equipment with a deliberation that looks far into the future. Having this in view, let us consider the building of a site for such protection as the Hubbell Building Co., A. W. Burritt Co., Acme Shear Co., the Armstrong Mfg. Co., etc., that form a part of the plan of the city, and the prompt appearance of such departments as Bridgeport boasts of, when in trouble, and look into the advisability of such a project. It might be obtained adjacent to that section which would assert control over a district at present entirely cut off from any application of the fire fighting element. In the near future the demand for the extension of Ogden street across the district occupied by such establishments as the Hubbell Building Co., A. W. Burritt Co., Acme Shear Co., the Armstrong Mfg. Co., etc., that form a part of the plan of the city, and the prompt appearance of such departments as Bridgeport boasts of, when in trouble, and look into the advisability of such a project. It might be obtained adjacent to that section which would assert control over a district at present entirely cut off from any application of the fire fighting element.

The future of the East Side is bright and its outlook through the years of such progressive, successful men as Mr. Bradbury is certainly encouraging, and the confidence in the city's future, evidenced by the real estate undertaking which he has begun in Hayes street, which is located in the village of Stone Ebenezer, a short distance from this place, was destroyed by an explosion today. There were two separate explosions, which took place at the same time. Twenty workmen were buried in the debris and the latest word from the scene is that they are probably dead. Only a few details of the accident have reached here. Ambulances have been sent.
